

Radionics in Herrnbaumgarten:

$E = m \times c^2$ – do you believe it?

Nicole Stöger

Radionics is a process in which the self-healing powers of an organism are stimulated.

The Woditschka family have been cultivating their vineyards for years with the support of Quantec radionics. Their success proves them right - or does it? What is behind it?

When was the last time your grandmother cooked for you? The second portion of roast pork and the delicious homemade choux pastry doughnuts have weighed you down? Then you have fallen victim to the theory of relativity. If you add energy to a body, its mass increases accordingly and vice versa. Energy and mass are equivalent. Albert Einstein knew this over a hundred years ago and became world-famous. Einstein's idea could now be taken a step further: If mass and energy are equivalent, it stands to reason that they also influence each other.

This is the principle according to which Radionics works.

According to its teachings, every thing and every living being is surrounded by a kind of energy, the so-called morphogenetic field. This morphogenetic field is said to contain complete information about its environment. If something is wrong with the living being, the morphogenetic field is also "sick". Some people or special computer programs can locate the deficits in the field and then "inform" it with the correct vibrations. It would therefore be possible to heal the organism via the morphogenetic field, not with chemical medicines or sprays but with energy (as in homeopathy).

Radionics in the vineyard

Rudolf and Monika Woditschka have always been pioneers in Herrnbaumgarten (north-eastern Weinviertel). When the Woditschka family started producing quality wine in 1992, it was met with great skepticism in the village. No wonder, as 80% of the winegrowers in Herrnbaumgarten still produce sparkling base wine today. Even back then, Rudolf Woditschka attached great importance to working in harmony with nature and cultivated his vineyards (now 13.5 hectares) according to the phases of the moon as far as precious time allowed. And that is already the core problem: it is impossible to treat every vineyard at the right phase of the moon, because the winegrower cannot wait for the right moon constellation to work, the effort would be too great. Radionics, on the other hand, is not time-bound. Monika Woditschka first became involved with this method in 1998. She has her own practice and is the only person in Austria to train doctors and therapists in this field. Inspired by the success of her clients, she persuaded her husband to try radionics in the vineyard. Initially, the Woditschkas' own skepticism led them to approach the matter with some suspicion. But in 1999, the time had come: Heavy hail caused severe crop failures among the winegrowers in Herrnbaumgarten. "Thanks to the radionics, our vineyards recovered more quickly. We had a higher yield than our colleagues and the quality was also much better than in previous years," says Woditschka. Since then, every detail of the winemaking process, from the cork to the spraying agents, has been "radionically informed" every four hours. "radionically informed".

Application of radionics

"Someone who closes their mind to radionics will not be helped to the same extent. The person who works with it must be open-minded, they must think holistically. Only then does it make sense to use radionics," explains Monika Woditschka. The vineyard receives oscillations from the so-called "white noise diode", which is the interface between the plant and the machine, the computer. The computer contains a database in which the vibrations of numerous homeopathic remedies are stored, which it retrieves as required. Once a year, the vineyards are photographed and digitally connected to the PC. Throughout the year, the PC automatically recognizes where there are deficiencies in the vineyard and sends the correct vibrations of the homeopathic remedy to the vineyard to strengthen it. Vibrations are sent to the morphogenetic field of the vineyard every four hours, day and night.

In this way, the plant can adapt better to vintage difficulties and react more flexibly to drought or disease pressure. The self-healing reflexes of the vineyard are stimulated, so to speak. Although the Woditschka farm does not do without pesticides, Rudolf Woditschka says that spraying can be reduced by 20 to 30%. He is also convinced that the higher qualities could not be achieved to the same extent without radionics. There would be much better results than with processing according to the phases of the moon. Even a very unpopular wine defect, the "Stoppler", has been reduced to a minimum by "sending the corks".

Critical Opinions on radionics

The effect of radionics cannot be scientifically proven. At first, the winegrowers in the Weinviertel are therefore incredulous. A treatment in which neither visible nor perceptible means are used is difficult to grasp. Some winegrowers claim that it is rather the ambition and tireless work of the Woditschka family that is responsible for the undeniably high quality. The fact that radionics involves working with energy is still comprehensible to most people, but working with a computer and camera pushes many people to the limits of their imagination. Combining technology with esotericism is difficult to understand, even for those who believe in esotericism. There is also the opinion that a "good radionist" does not need any technical aids to pass on positive energies to the object. Whether it is the perfection of the Woditschkas or the controversial vibrations that are responsible for their success will probably remain a mystery.

Radionics with QUANTEC®

Quantec is an association of management consultants who work with radionics. Only consultants who have experience in working with radionics, have passed a special aptitude test and also fulfill the other quality criteria of this association are allowed to use this seal of approval. The company is based in Germany.

Quantec uses white noise diode technology (a random generator). This is a wireless connection between the plant and the computer. The transmission is based on mental communication between computer and therapist. The random generator scans biofields in just a few minutes. The result of the generator run is a therapy suggestion that can be transmitted radionically. The therapist has no influence on the analysis.

Up to 100,000 stored test entries are scanned for resonance, which take into account the physical, mental and spiritual levels. Database frequencies include, for example, homeopathy (over 2,000 preparations), colors, sounds, acupuncture, allergens and Bach flowers. The user can also add to the database frequencies. With Quantec, automatic transmissions of up to 500 objects are possible day and night. Transmission intervals and transmission duration can be set individually. Quantec consists of a laptop, software, a rose quartz triangle, the diode with the white noise including gold clip, a digital photo camera, a hotline service for 6 weeks, and initial training with installation at the user's home.
